The present disclosure relates to biodegradable polymers based on a plant protein containing a polyhydroxyalkanoate (PHA) such as, for example, an alginate. These polymers may have a reduced plasticity and an improved resistance to mechanical stress as compared with conventional PHA polymers. Plant proteins, such as particularly vegetal proteins, may be used to prepare biodegradable plastics. The use of plant proteins for preparing biodegradable plastics may have certain advantages over the use of proteins derived from animals. First, plant proteins are non-toxic. Therefore, it is more difficult to produce foodstuffs with plant proteins than with animal proteins. Plant proteins are also protein-rich products of nature and, consequently, can offer interesting alternatives in the food or non-food applications. Biodegradable polymers based on plant proteins have been described. One example is the use of plant proteins in biodegradable plastics. Illustrative polymers are those described in WO2006/004362 and WO2007/094259. However, a satisfactory plasticity/modulus for these polymers is not provided. Moreover, the stability of these polymers can be improved. Moreover, the dissolution and biodegradation of biodegradable polymers are affected by their plasticity and tensile mechanical properties. There is thus a need for biodegradable polymers having improved dissolution and mechanical properties.Q: How do I pass additional parameters when calling a view from a controller method in the url in asp.net mvc? I have a table of companies. When creating new company there is a button which calls the company method in the companies controller, passing the company object as a parameter. It is as simple as this: I have the CompaniesController method: [HttpGet] public ActionResult Create(Company company) { try { return View(new Company()); } catch { return HttpNotFound(); } } As you can see I'm simply passing

Q: Running Event driven Workflow I am trying to run an event driven workflow but getting a little confused on how to configure the "Selection Event". I've googled and searched but can't seem to find a clear, concise, example for how to do this. I have a workflow with a list selection step to select a record, a workflow action to move it to different list, and a workflow action to run through a "From" and "To" lookup table. I run into an error when the workflow is trying to save changes to the list. I get the error "Error on Save Workflow Configuration setting the workflow cannot be found." There is a little more description here which does mention "Workflow" on page 19. Can someone tell me what this workflow is and how to properly execute it? A: Workflows can be run in either a synchronous or asynchronous execution model. To run a workflow synchronously in a list, you have to use the "Run Workflow when item is selected" button on the list view settings. If you have a workflow and list type that supports asynchronous execution, the workflow will run when the change has been made to the list. What you need to do is to change the synchronous execution rule to "When This List Item is selected". If your list is on-premises and uses SharePoint in-place upgrade feature, this can be done in the web front-end by accessing the list view settings. You can find the "Run Workflow when this item is selected" button here: Or on the list view page: If You Want To Work In The World's No. 1 Online Retailer. ... "If you want to work in the world's no. 1 online retailer, you've come to the right place" Working in a retail company means you may end up in a store (if you're lucky enough to get a job in a store), as well as working online. In today's technical age, the basis of the retail business is still in bricks and mortar. But the online operations are becoming the focus for many retail chains. There are major advantages in working in the retail industry for the online industry. Before we look at how to work in the world's top online retailer (and how to join this company), we should look at the
