1 Quick T2Si Lite is a program with a high degree of speech recognition. When you pronounce, you want to your own native language. It is not necessary to understand several languages simultaneously. Install it quickly, easily and most of the time for free. Q: cannot use self.topview I need to show and hide a tool bar when a button is pressed. Since I need to update the status bar I need to save the old and then restore it when a button is pressed. I followed the code in this thread: Here is the code in the viewcontroller of interest: `func saveState() { // Save the state of the toolbar let savedState = self.tabBarController?.topViewController as! UITabBarController self.toolbarController?.saveState() self.tabBarController?.setViewControllers([self.tabBarController?.selectedViewController], animated: false) self.tabBarController?.viewControllers = [self.tabBarController?.selectedViewController] self.setViewControllers([self.tabBarController?.viewControllers[0]], animated: true) // Pop the state back let restoredController = self.tabBarController?.viewControllers.last as! UITabBarController let oldNavController = restoredController.viewControllers.first as! UINavigationController oldNavController.viewControllers = [self.tabBarController?.selectedViewController] self.tabBarController?.setViewControllers([oldNavController.viewControllers.first, self.tabBarController?.selectedViewController], animated: false) // Update the status bar UIApplication.sharedApplication().setStatusBarHidden(false, animated: false) } This works fine if I am using a tab bar but doesn't if I use a navigation controller. When I try to call self.topview in the callback function it complains about self not being visible (I also tried topviewController.topview but no dice).`
