Napolitano's resignation came less than a week after a firestorm erupted in Congress over the failure of the Department of Homeland Security to alert the public about the nearly three-year-old border incident with Mexico, in which thousands of mostly Latin American children were caught crossing the border illegally. At the center of the controversy was Napolitano, a former Arizona governor and Obama cabinet member, who came under intense criticism from lawmakers and the White House following the revelation. ADVERTISEMENT Napolitano faced pressure from immigration advocates and Republicans to resign or withdraw after it emerged that officials had actively tried to keep secret the extent of the immigration crisis at the border. And on Thursday, more than a dozen top administration officials, including Napolitano, the White House press secretary and the National Security Council spokeswoman, were asked to testify before the Senate Homeland Security Committee. In addition to Napolitano, other officials summoned by committee chairman Joe Lieberman included Secretary of State Hillary Clinton Hillary Diane Rodham ClintonJeff Flake: Republicans'should hold the same position' on SCOTUS vacancy as 2016 Momentum growing among Republicans for Supreme Court vote before Election Day Warning signs flash for Lindsey Graham in South Carolina MORE and Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson.
