As a conventional example of this type of air conditioner, for example, there has been known one having a configuration described in Patent Document 1. In this air conditioner, while the air conditioner is operated, a driver housing disposed on the upper side of an engine is moved downward in a state that the engine is turned off, and during a time until the engine is started, the driver housing is moved upward together with the engine. Furthermore, Patent Document 2 discloses a configuration in which an air conditioner main body and an electric motor that serves as a driving source are collectively supported by a frame. 3e33713323
