Uses QR Code to interact with friends Bleep is a chat app that only asks you to create a QR Code to exchange messages between you and your friends. No email, no username, no password. Once you have created your QR Code, you are ready to connect. Bleep can be used when you want to talk to your friends without being spotted. It does not store your conversations so you can feel secure. Share pictures and videos by scanning a QR Code Bleep is able to recognize several pictures and videos in pictures. When you scan a QR Code, your friend will be able to see your picture in his/her chat. Transfers data by downloading files Bleep can automatically download and upload files on your network and outside. If a friend has sent you a file, you can download it and save it on your device. You can also upload a file by using the QR Code on your friend's device. Chatting is simple, quick and private. Bleep is not a big heavy app. You can install it in less than five seconds and you will not have to pay any hidden fee to use it. Download Bleep app and follow the instructions. Bleep A privacy-oriented chat app with a simplified interface Bleep is a lightweight and very easy to handle piece of software design to function as a chat client, which you can use whenever you want to exchange information with close ones, without the fear of being monitored or having your privacy invaded. Accessible and clear-cut usage After the installation process, you can create an account using a valid email address or a phone number, along with a username, in order to make it easier for friends to find you. Nonetheless, Bleep also offers an 'Incognito' mode, where you can remain anonymous and provide no personal information about yourself. Connecting with friends will be made via a QR code or a public key. Write messages or make voice calls to your friends After having connected to Bleep, you can begin adding friends so you can start chatting with them. The utility provides you with the option of importing your address book from your Google account. However, this can also be done either by inputting the phone number or email address that your friends registered with, or by entering their unique public key; each person needs to confirm the addition before you are able to communicate with them. Your contacts will be organized in 'Offline'

Bleep is a lightweight and very easy to handle piece of software designed to function as a chat client, which you can use whenever you want to exchange information with close ones, without the fear of being monitored or having your privacy invaded. Accessible and clear-cut usage After the installation process, you can create an account using a valid email address or a phone number, along with a username, in order to make it easier for friends to find you. Nonetheless, Bleep also offers an 'Incognito' mode, where you can remain anonymous and provide no personal information about yourself. Connecting with friends will be made via a QR code or a public key. Write messages or make voice calls to your friends After having connected to Bleep, you can begin adding friends so you can start chatting with them. The utility provides you with the option of importing your address book from your Google account. However, this can also be done either by inputting the phone number or email address that your friends registered with, or by entering their unique public key; each person needs to confirm the addition before you are able to communicate with them. Your contacts will be organized in 'Offline' and 'Online' groups, with no possibility of categorizing them in a different manner. You can then start a conversation with someone, by writing messages and hitting the 'Send' button, for the other person to receive it. However, file transfers or picture swapping are not available. Moreover, Bleep allows you to make voice calls, just by pressing the phone icon in the conversation window of the targeted friend, with the option to hang up at any moment. Secure conversations due to lack of data storage Since Bleep functions in peer-to-peer mode, the information transmitted between people is never stored on any servers, nor is it viewable by anyone other than yourself. Consequently, this makes you less susceptible to privacy invasions or attacks. Furthermore, each message is encrypted and only kept on your own device, but this too can be removed with a simple button press, from the 'Delete History' section of the settings. An appealing chat tool To conclude, Bleep is an interesting and reliable instant messaging instrument that can help you guard your privacy in the online environment, even when communicating with friends and colleagues, by permitting 'Incognito' access and not storing your data on any device other than you own. Description: Hey

What's New In Bleep?

Bleep is a chat tool that functions in peer-to-peer mode, so the information transmitted between people is not stored on any server or shared with anyone. This features, along with the lack of cookie management, makes it quite secure. The user interface is very straightforward and clear-cut. You can create an account to connect to Bleep, using a valid email address or a phone number, username, plus password. After connecting, you can either start a conversation with a friend or call them by the phone icon, Bleep will start transferring data over the Internet.
