Only folks trying to win elections to a federal, state or county office are required by law to register with the Federal Election Commission (FEC), because the commission only enforces "Federal Election Campaign Act" of 1971. Nevertheless, the state laws that lay out how to register, and local county rules that regulate primary and general elections, also apply. Generally, you must be at least 18 to register. And even if you aren't yet a resident, or are living abroad, you can register and vote if you happen to register with a state or county supervisor of elections office. Registration is a two-step process. First you register, then you may fill out an application for a ballot. Instructions for registration may be included in your voter registration brochure. So even if you don't plan to vote this year, you will be registered to vote as soon as you finish the registration process. - 2282 = -v. Is v prime? True Let b = -16 - -20.
