A scene from the exhibition 'The Dafen Oil Painting Village Experience' in Shenzhen, China. An immersive reality 360 - video experiment designed to immerse the experiencer in the feeling of Shenzhen. The experience is set in the village of Dafen, south of Hong Kong, where more than 20,000 artists and craftspeople can be found combining their workflows in a huge factory. All the various workshops, small and large, are partitioned using dividers painted in bright colours. Paintings are produced directly on large sheets of polyester film, which are then assembled to make small paintings and small series. This is also the place of origin of the technique of panoramic painting, or oil painting. All the pieces are made in the same way: they start as paper-cuts, then some experimental digital media experiments are performed and then scanned into a painting. Panoramic art is the art of view. By blending the colors of the raw material and assembling them into a huge girth, the viewer is offered a 360 degree visual spectacle. This is the art of view, the view itself, and the view is the central theme of the entire project. This is not a replication of the real village. It is not meant to be an exact reproduction of reality. It is instead a creative statement about the interaction between old and new media, about information-rich research environments, and about the tension between scientific instruments and artistic media. The painting is intended to help the experiencer get a better sense of the scale and scale of the city itself. The exhibition in Shenzhen was made for viewers to experience, was intended to be shown at places like Shenzhen International Art Expo, Art Beijing 2015, and the 4th International Annual Conference of the Chinese Association of Art Media Technology (CAAMT). It was also intended to be used as a training tool for the development of art media and VR art education, at the new curriculum of the Shenzhen Institute of Media and Entertainment (MME). Why do we need this kind of experience? China is a massive market. The Dafen Oil Painting Village experience is a large experiment about the future of media and fabrication. Any immersive media experience is always a large experiment because there are so many unknown variables. The fluidity of interactions between technology and culture, the unknowns of human psychology in large groups, the question of what happens when we immerse people in an environment created by us, and the question c9d1549cdd

EphemeralSmile: You're a Lime Journal writer, wondering what the hell you're doing here! Cherrygoround: I admit my role in all of this is a bit of a mystery. The truth is I'm just a fan of good writing. Sendaria:You're the most user-friendly person in the whole town. That's why I came to Lime Journal. Play as a group, and you can do anything you want. The script allows one to be the Narrator, the Editor, or the Captain of the ship, or all of them. You can randomly choose one character to portray, one to inform, and one to be the official author. Play with or without me. If you play by yourself, you're the author of the story. But if you play in a group, you can decide whether I should be there. If you play with me, though, we can all make the decisions together, and things can get really wild. I say I'm the captain, but in truth, I'm just the lucky one who gets to write the dialogue for you. You can make decisions to try and make sure you have the endings you want, or to go with your first impulse, or to go for the "fun" choice. To get the ending that you want, you have to make choices that will influence what happens in the game, and we have to live with the decisions that we make. The End You can change the ending by choosing the correct one. Contents Characters All the characters in Terranova are based on people from The Lime Journal community. Everything you are in Lime Journal is based off of someone else, but most of the stories here are the original creators' work. The Narrator of the story is trying to tell what happened to her, what happened to the people around her, and how she herself is changing. The Editor is trying to make sure everything is correct, and that it is true to what happened. If you ask her for clarification, she'll tell you what happened. The Captain is representing the community. If you ask him for his role, he'll tell you the role of each character. The Captain's role is to be the one that happens. If you ask the question, "What would your captain's role be?", that's who you will get. Entertainers
