Simulator: You are a homeless person. It's time to survive. Want to survive? Complete these tasks. TRADING There is no permanent flat in this city. For example, the horse traded coin, the sheep traded herring, etc. It can be traded, like everything. It may be exchanged for something of value to you. There is no logic to the way such trades are conducted. ANIMALS You will need a companion at some point. Fortunately, there are plenty of other animals in the city. They may help you survive the winter. CAMPING The wind blows from the ocean. You may camp overnight in some sheltered place. Of course, you may sleep on a beach, but it's not recommended. TOWN The town is a large area where you may trade goods and animals. SMALL AUTO Small autos are not that popular. It is possible to ride on them, but you cannot store items or people in them. Try to avoid the small autos unless you have a need. BIKE Bikes are often sought by people. They may be used for trade if the owner is willing to trade. You may also sell a bike for a long-term goal, such as a degree. BIRD Various birds are the city's life. You will have to capture or buy some. It's easy to take some people, but it's not so easy to get some birds. Learn how to catch them. VEHICLE As mentioned above, large vehicles have no place in the city. Try to avoid them, as you will not be able to store anything in them. This is also true of trucks. CLOTH Clothes are a great help during a cold winter. Since they do not have storage capacity, they will be sold to you. What's new in Homeless Simulator:

 is a free indie game: it supports Touch Bar, App Store and Top Shelf, and it's got a score of 95/100 from (obviously) real game reviewers. It's also extremely easy to play: just press the A button to flee and release the bomb. It's available on the App Store and Google Play. I've been playing it for some while, and it's been growing on me. It's a great game to play alone: just flee and depress the bomb. I generally do a bit of running and bombing, and then the city is destroyed (and you can collect your rewards). But it's even better when you have a companion with you. You can chat to them, and if they decide to stay with you, then they get promoted and take over your profiles. Together, you'll destroy the city you were born in with a broken heart that keeps shredding the buildings that leave pieces of your family. You have two profiles, one that was born in the same time and place as your companion, and one that was born in another part of the city. They'll both destroy you and your companion in the same time, but the double bomb approach (double deprivation) will make you the bigger loser. The game also includes the Accident, a dramatic graphic where the companion gets killed, just by you and for no apparent reason. (The game also supports three profiles, but I found the twin one the most interesting. Really, though, you can fall to working alone, to making bombs and destroying buildings. It gets very easy, and you can do it knowing that the currency goes straight into your pocket. You can afford to run and bomb a few times, since there are bonuses from killing lots and lots of civilians.) The first time you play you'll meet a homeless friend, who was saved by you in an accident and who later joins you in the game. He's wounded, so you need to help him and rush him to the hospital. He says that he's cut off from his family and even the sight of his car makes him cry. He recommends that you visit your parents, who are older than the rest of you. It's a great scene, when he tells you to go visit your parents. It's an epic move that feel like its intended to move the player emotionally.
