Meet'n'Fuck Iron Giant parody part 2.Gums are employed in numerous applications, both in the area of foodstuffs and in the area of coating materials and pharmaceuticals. However, in some of these applications there may be difficulties in obtaining the complete desired benefits from the use of the gum, and in particular an insufficient or sub-standard viscosity. For instance, for foodstuffs, gums, such as guar gum, may be added to improve the viscosity of a foodstuff in order to impart or improve the characteristics of the product. Gums of this type are of particular use as a thickening agent, for example in the production of chocolate, confectionery and gum paste. In addition, they are often employed in combination with other foodstuffs, which may be liquid or semi-liquid, as a thickening agent in the production of sauces or fruit juices. Gums used in foodstuffs are relatively expensive materials, which although still represent a relatively low proportion of the cost of the foodstuff, may nevertheless have a significant effect on the overall cost of production. Therefore it is generally desirable that they are employed in the foodstuffs as efficiently as possible. For instance, it is desirable that they are present in minimum quantities, but at the same time that they do provide the desired improvement in viscosity. It has therefore been proposed to prepare gum pre-concentrates which require less than the usual gum quantities and are soluble in water to give satisfactory
