High incidence of biliary strictures associated with interventional catheters: An anatomic study. The aim of this study was to determine the incidence of biliary strictures associated with different interventional catheters. The incidence of biliary strictures associated with different types of interventional catheters has been reported in the literature, but there has been no research conducted on the relationship between biliary strictures and the diameter of the interventional catheter. This study retrospectively analyzed the medical records of 168 patients with biliary obstruction who had endoscopic retrograde cholangiopancreatography (ERCP) and treatment with different interventional catheters (10 Fr, 11 Fr, 12 Fr, and 14 Fr) between January 2013 and December 2017. The anatomy of the bile duct was analyzed for diameter reduction of the bile duct with catheter insertion. In total, biliary strictures were found in 17 of 168 patients (10%). A total of 14 strictures (82%) occurred when the catheter passed through the common bile duct at a diameter of 11-14 Fr. Fifteen strictures (88%) occurred at the common bile duct-cystic duct junction, and 2 strictures (12%) developed at the cystic duct-cystic duct junction help of specialized tools, like Ping Thing, you can easily manage specific computers or printers that have the tendency of crashing, using their IP address, and reboot them if necessary. The interface consists of a small two-buttoned panel whose skin can be changed from the settings. The toolbar can be moved to any location within the screen. To access the context menu, simply right-click on the icon. Some predefined themes you can choose from are darkness, media 9, retro, tini, or swift. Enter the corresponding IP address and device name. Each button is linked to one device, while the color shows the status: stopped (red) and running (green). By hovering the mouse over the devices, you can view their names, IP addresses and status. It's possible to add as many devices as you want, by inputting their name and IP address. From the same window, you can enable notifications if the disk space becomes full. Set daily reboots and configure the audio settings to fit your needs. Plus, automatic schedules may be established at a particular day and time of the week. You can lock the bar on top of other apps for easy access, and change its position to vertical or horizontal. The tool lets you reboot specific devices or all of them at once. From the properties, you can modify the ping interval, threshold, as well as schedule files to open on PC failure or reboot. You can set and personalize sound alarms, and send SMS to your mobile to get notified when you are not nearby your PC. The bottom line Taking everything into account, Ping Thing is a reliable and intuitive application designed to aid you in easily rebooting unresponsive devices, like PCs or printers using their IP addresses, as long as they are connected to your local network.
