The gunman, who was armed with a semi-automatic Ruger AR-556 rifle, began shooting at close range in the remote East Texas city of Sutherland Springs, local police said in a statement. "After the suspect fired his weapon, multiple victims hid in the vestibule of the First Baptist Church," the statement said. "The shooter walked back through the church and continued firing." Police, acting on a 911 call, were able to get into position to block the shooter from further entering the church and ended the attack, the statement said. Investigators said the killer, who has been named as Devin Kelley, had no criminal record but was already the subject of a domestic violence protection order. Local TV station KENS reported that the 24-year-old was the husband of the woman he had been fighting with. Kelley had been charged in 2012 with assaulting his then-girlfriend and their child. In the case, he was not convicted, his attorney said, but did not contest the allegations. In 2012, he was charged with drunk driving and evading police and in 2014 for theft by receiving. The latter charge was dismissed, but he received a deferred-adjudication sentence, a common form of probation, his attorney said. The attorney, Steven Munisteri, told reporters on Monday that the accused gunman "was very involved in church." "He was part of a church that in no way was an arm of this military kind of thing," Munisteri said. "There was no government involvement in his home life." Kelley also had a concealed weapon license, Texas Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Toni Grossmann told reporters. "At this time, we believe that the reason he was able to obtain the weapon was due to a protective order that was already in place against him," said Grossmann. Kelley lived in the nearby town of New Braunfels, about 20 miles from
