Ativador Shovel Knight rivals 18 downloadQ: HTML: Accessing Image resources with query string I am designing a website for a school project. The client requires a "logo" design. However I am not allowed to put HTML in the css/html files, so I would like to create a new folder, put the logo in there and access the files through an image tag in css. Is this possible? For example, say I have a folder called /images/test.css: .logo { height: 200px; width: 200px; background: url(../images/test/logo.png); /* NO CERTAIN PROTOCOL EXCEPT */ } (In this example, logo.png is a file in the /images/test/logo.png folder. The image is 200 pixels wide and 200 pixels tall.) The Problem: I cannot access the image through a url such as: "images/test/logo.png" I get the following error: The requested URL '/images/test/logo.png' was not found on this server. If I understand correctly, it is because if you are accessing a file from a different folder, the browser will look for the url starting from the root directory. In this case, that would be "/images/" A: As your question also suggests, you could use CSS to retrieve the image via background property. However, you don't have to have CSS files in the same directory with images you're using. All you need to do is to have a web-server or any other program that can serve up an image. In your case, it's just a css file in the same directory that the page that needs to be styled with an image. Update: It also has to be noted that if you're using a web-server to serve the image, the path to the image would have to be relative to the directory the HTML is located. What if it's in a sub-directory? To get around this, use the url() function. Something like this: .logo { height: 200px; width

I am using apple macbook pro with Ubuntu 14.04 Please help me to identify this issue and how to solve it Thanks in advance! A: As @Pascal explained in his comment to my question. The problem was solved by adding one line to ~/.pam_environment file and using the values of that file for user.profile. Posting the line of the file and the solution in case someone encounters the same problem. export FULL_APP_PATH=/Applications/Resbit SDK.app/Contents/Resources Finally, echo $FULL_APP_PATH >>.profile Use of a homogeneous composition of peroxy nitrite to oxidize endogenous thiols. Peroxynitrite (PN), the product of the diffusion-limited reaction of nitric oxide (NO) and superoxide anion (O₂⁻), is a short-lived free radical that is being increasingly recognized for its significance in a variety of biological processes. In the present study, the potential of PN to oxidize endogenous thiols was determined using a homogeneous composition of PN generated in situ by the reaction of NO and O₂⁻ in the presence of tryptophanamide. Oxidation of human serum albumin and hemoglobin was measured using a homogeneous composition of PN generated in situ by the reaction of NO and O₂⁻ in the presence of tryptophanamide. Phenylarsine oxide, a flavin-containing inhibitor of tryptophan-catalyzed reactions, was used to investigate the extent to which PN-mediated oxidation of endogenous thiols is catalyzed by tryptophan itself. The extent of PN oxidation (nmol/mg) of albumin was at least an order of magnitude greater than that of hemoglobin; however, phenylarsine oxide-induced inhibition of PN oxidation of albumin was not nearly as complete as that of hemoglobin. Neither PN-mediated albumin oxidation nor phenylarsine oxide-mediated inhibition was dependent upon the concentration of tryptophanamide. A homogeneous composition of PN generated in situ by the reaction of NO and O₂⁻ in the presence of tryptophanamide is a highly potent oxidant that can oxidize endogenous thiols. However, the magnitude of the PN-mediated oxidation of endogenous thiols does not appear to be equivalent to that of hemoglobin.Q:
