The Windows XP automatic shutdown or hibernation process is fully customizable for end users. Users can control when the system shuts down or hibernates and whether it is displayed or not. Additionally, users can choose to extend the sleep/hibernation process and other options that include a file integrity check and the display of a graphical hibernation wakeup screen. This article describes how to setup automatic shutdown. When a computer automatically shuts down or hibernates, the Windows desktop can either be visible or be hidden. Alternatively, a user can choose not to shut down or hibernate the computer. If Windows is shut down or hibernated, a graphical hibernate wakeup screen is displayed on the screen in a set position before the shut down or hibernate starts. This can help a user that needs to restart the computer quickly. This article contains the following sections:

- Shutdown preferences
- Shutdown modes
- Shutdown options
- Options
- Extend hibernation
- Shutdown options

Select a wake up method To wake up a computer from a hibernation or sleep state, the following steps must be completed: 1. Select “Wake up...” (in the Shut Down menu) if the computer is in a hibernation state, or select “Restart” if the computer is in a sleep state. 2. If the computer is in a sleep state, the system will wake up. If the computer is in a hibernation state, Windows will shutdown. 3. If you choose to hibernate the computer, the computer will be shutdown and the system will be hibernated instead. The hibernated state includes enough information to fully boot the computer in a very short time so that you can continue your tasks. The hibernated state is saved in an inactive state on the computer’s disk. The hibernated state is virtually like a totally powered down state. 4. When you shutdown or hibernate a computer, the current hibernation state is saved. If you choose to hibernate the computer, the hibernated state is saved. When the computer is rebooted, the previous hibernation state is restored. Select a shutdown location You can choose whether to shut down the computer from the desktop or from a specific location. It will reboot your computer without any warning. You just need to un-plug your computer from the power source, and it will reboot. Nowadays computers are very important part of our life. They are like a toy, but we buy it only for fun and that is why we inform you that if you intend to use Auto Shutdown feature, then download BlueCove 2.00.. There are plenty of features out there which are actually very easy to use: MDT, Group Policy Objects, Image Creation Tools, PowerCLI. However, some of these features are not as easy to use as they could be. Sometimes there's a trick in the docs, sometimes you have to play the system, and most of the time it's trial and error. I have collected a list of features/tools which are easy to use but can be a bit tricky at times. BlueCove 2.0 or microsoft exchange management shell (MES) is Microsoft's latest addition to Exchange management software. The latest version of BlueCove supports Exchange 2013 and is the first Exchange Management Shell client for Exchange 2013. The release of BlueCove 2.0 or microsoft exchange management shell (MES) is critical for Exchange administrators. It gives you complete control over all your Microsoft's Exchange system. This new tool replaces the antiquated Microsoft Management Console, or MMC in short. The release of BlueCove 2.0 is quite similar to previous versions and includes many new features. Also, I have come across few errors in my article. So I added some additional information. You'll find some of the benefits of installing BlueCove 2.0 and MES in this section. Like previous version, MES is also a very useful tool for Exchange administrators. It helps you perform a lot of tasks quickly and easily. Exchange administrators can use this tool to manage many different aspects of an Exchange mailbox, server, or Exchange organization. Here

LogiXor is a TCP/IP test tool for scanning your PC from the Internet for potential security holes. It does this by simulating all sorts of realistic situations, such as a virus attack, browser hijacking, web server degradation or a web server intrusion. When you have LogiXor installed, you can choose an Internet server for testing from a list of public web servers. These are varied in speed, number of connections and available features. You can select a built-in file location for testing if you want to limit the range of possible attacks to a local network. You must also specify the IP address of a target device, such as a printer, to test for potential connection problems with your device. Lastly, you must select the range of computers that you want to test. On the lower left-hand corner of the LogiXor interface, you can choose the starting and ending dates for your test and view the results, along with a map showing the distribution of the scanned PCs. Whether you're computer is safe or not, LogiXor can help you find out.
