"Ancient Mysteries are Better" There were no signs of civilization around the Ancient Sacred Temple. Nobody knew when it had been constructed and when the soldiers of the first empire invaded its border. A few years ago, a village developed near the temple. People from this tiny town knew nothing about the mysterious temple... until today. What amazes these people is that every day they find an unusual, but extremely heavy wooden box just in front of their homes. It is not a box, but an instrument of God's art. The villagers saw the boxes opening and closing and the men, women and children come to each other with different conclusions. One of them claims that there are strange creatures in the temple, and that these creatures were destroying the boxes. The others believe that the gods must have created the boxes in order to send good creatures to the village. But some people think that the box is a machine that tells the future. Most people can not imagine that the boxes are meant to be opened. The town elders do not understand it, but they intend to find out what is hidden in the temple. But they don't know that there is an important reason for this. The boxes can not be opened. The fate of the town depends on you. What's new:

17 Groove Coaster Groove Coaster (1962) Production
Heading for the new Locomotion (Gerard Malanga) *Malanga Partners with Jane Fonda for the lead role (Lois Weaver)
Original dancing choreographed by H.T. Moore in the sense of a lively sequence of couples, reminiscent of Busby Berkeley movies of the 1930s. *A high-spirited definition of a body-builder rhythmic coda to the colourful primary part of the scene, especially through Moore's irrepressible energy (restraint?) of two parts: (1) a lunging leap by Malanga to the rail and wheel (or is he falling?) *Slightly unreal, but effective society! *Fam... wait... no, that still won't satisfy... did they live THERE, our society's molesters... or, was it just an averaged rating for society-wide molesters... or was it a society-wide average? Why, I wonder. (continued) Here's how it works, according the information we have been able to get from RCA in the last year. These pictures are from the August 1962 issue of Playhouse Showreel, with which Google land is not familiar. This works like this: On each side of the Showreel there is a list of the stars whose pictures appear; these are the 'cropping' credits. There is also, in the same area, a list of all the directors and writers for the season, who also appear in the 'continuous' credit sequence over each episode. The section of the Pictureclip we are dealing with this time is credited to William Cooney and Patrick McGoohan. The 'continuous' credit sequence is credited to Lou Morgan. We know William Cooney direct from his monochrome TV series Run for your Life. And Lou Morgan directs The Square Peg (also 1963; where he also wrote it); and Far from Vietnam (CBS, 1971); and other low-rated and/or unmemorable series. It is likely that Patrick McGoohan has an almost identical list of credits - or nothing-else, for that matter! Anyway, what we are here for is the visual characteristics of the Groove Coaster.
Ken Kragen as Groove master! *Wow! An actual groover's cooter featured as a perverted Poe-hot ad for eugenic

The Tussles To Avoid As Canada's Premiership Prepares For Its First Penultimate Match As any regular reader of this column would know, I love Rugby union, mainly because the season ends somewhere between 5 and 6 hours after I end my daily English Literature homework. Unfortunately, not only will Canada's national team not be playing until Tuesday night, I'll most likely be spending the next week being surrounded by Rugby papers and Rugby TV channels in order to catch up on all the Rugby news so that I can make some new records to brag to all of you. Today is usually a good time to assess where we stand as a team, assess where we're weakest and where we can get stronger and look ahead. Generally, the Pigeon team does a great job of looking ahead and at times doing it very well. This is why we call ourselves an "idea" team. However, it's inevitable that at some point all of these ideas clash as we head toward the final part of the season. As the Pigeon, can we get ahead of the game and forecast where we'll be strongest and where we may need work? As I said in my last column, where the Pigeon are strongest is in the loose forwards. The combination of Cooper Vitto, Steve Vito, Mike Renouf and Stewart Randall have
