.Q: Xcode 9.3.1 - Error: No supported sources found I have upgraded Xcode to the latest version 9.3.1 for some last development. When trying to build my project I encounter an error saying that I have no supported sources found (but I do have so). The following message appears in the Xcode Organizer: The supported sources on this computer are the 5 sources installed on the computer (and new ones). You have not selected any other sources. This means no other SDKs or build tools. If these are not correct, then you must manually add the supported sources that you need. It is true that the supported sources are the 5 sources I have installed (I can't install anything else in my iOS App Development Environment), but how can I manually add the one that I need? A: As @Robin H. and @Phil mentioned, I had a problem with that because I switched my Mac from macOS Mojave to High Sierra, so: Go to Settings > General > Software Update Then click Download Manually This way you can download the Xcode beta (used with High Sierra) at the "available candidates" section: And at the "latest build" section at the bottom: Then you will be able to use the "Latest build in Xcode" from the left (you will need to set it as Default): Training to Combat Depression It's no secret that depression is one of the most common mental health issues. In the U.S., 9.2 million adults are treated for depression each year and about 17 percent of Americans ages 18 and older have experienced a major depressive episode in their lifetime. Training to combat depression Jehovah's Witnesses have the highest rate of depression in the world. In the U.S., about 1 million Witnesses are estimated to be affected by depression. How do you combat depression? Here are three things that you can do to combat depression: 1) Treat yourself well One of the best ways to keep depression at bay is to be kind to yourself. Try to take care of yourself each day, instead of just waiting for the weekend. And it's not just about treating your body well, but also your mind and soul. Remember that you are a valuable person and you should give yourself the 6d1f23a050
