each of the three (3) different ways is scored differently, based on how well your unit does. in the first way, simply defeating the enemy unit is enough to earn the victory. in the second way, you need to earn a specific amount of points in order to win the scenario. in the third way, you have to capture the command post, and then take over half of the island. the berlin map is a sort of "hybrid" of the first two ways: it is the easiest map to complete and to achieve victory, but there is a smaller chance of earning victory. the score is shown under the map on the mini-map. for example, if your score is above 400 points, you have a good chance of winning the scenario. the mini-map also shows the amount of points you need to earn to win in each of the three (3) ways. the tutorial allows you to choose the scenario you want to play. you can choose from the five (5) new battlestrike scenarios, and even the new berlin scenario. in addition, you can choose the difficulty level. the game will automatically present you with a map that is a little bit larger than the map you saw in the tutorial. the berlin map has a nice view of the city that is the home of the soviet union, and you can see several big landmarks. on the berlin map, you can press the (p) key to turn on the pause-button. this will pause the game, so you can look around the map and get the lay of the land. if you can't figure out where the command post is located, press (q) to pause the game, then press (p) again to resume. on the berlin map, the command post is located on the small island in the middle of the map. from there, you can control your units on the other side of the map. 5ec8ef588b
